“Help save an endangered sea turtle of the pearl of the Indian oceans by visiting a turtle hatchery located on the coastal line”

A pleasant and unusual thing to do while in Sri Lanka is observe turtles. There are many locations in Sri Lanka that are perfect for turtle watching. The hatcheries are dedicated to taking care of injured or rescued adult turtles. Rekawa, a center for experiments and the "turtle watch" project is a must visit. The loggerhead, hawksbill, olive ridley, green, and leatherback turtles are among the endangered sea turtle species that are known to congregate on Rekawa's southern golden beaches. The Rekawa Turtle Watch is a conservation initiative with the goal of safeguarding the nesting areas so that the eggs hatch without risk and the young turtles can return to their natural habitat.

ELLA

Ella is a beautiful small backpacker-hub on the southern edge of Sri Lanka's Hill Country. It has become to go to town in the hill country for tourists and as a result has a reasonably well-established tourism-orientated economy. It's situated in the middle of beautiful countryside, with small vegetable plots in the valleys, tea plantations on the hill slopes and forests on the tops. The climate throughout most of the year is typical of the high Hill Country, with a hot sun by midday, but a moderate air temperature.

★ From Waligama to Ella Highlights

Yala Highlights

Yala is famous for its large population of Asian elephants. Visitors to the park often encounter herds of elephants roaming freely, particularly in the park's open plains and near water sources. These majestic animals can be seen foraging for food, bathing in lakes, or socializing with other elephants. The best time to observe elephants is during the dry season (May to August), when they gather around the remaining water holes.

Yala is one of the best places in the world to spot the elusive Sri Lankan leopard. The park's dense forests and scrublands provide excellent camouflage for these solitary predators. Visitors have a good chance of encountering leopards, especially in the early morning or late afternoon when they are most active. The park's leopard population is notable for its unique adaptations to the local environment, and sightings of these magnificent big cats are there.
